ISSUES ARE DRAWN IN PRIMARY FIGHT; ASPIRANTS IN OPEN

No Surprises are Sprung on Last Day for Filing Petitions.

JOHN WORK FOR CONTROLLER

Cons. Refuses to Run for that Office But Is Put Forth for Connell on Two Tickets; George Mack in the Fight After Having Quit Once.

For the first time since the campaign began the issues were now drawn. Yesterday was the last day for filing nomination petitions and all of the candidates are now out in the open. The decision will be made at the polls.

Few surprises were sprung at the eleventh hour. This was disappointing to some of the more radical of the reform element, who took seriously the efforts of the Democrats to stir up friction among those who favor a fusion movement. It is generally conceded that the fight for fusion will center on the councilmanic candidates, yet there are only five men who have a chance for the endorsement of both parties. The general sentiment prevails that unless the Republicans or Bull Moose are endorsed by both parties, the election of a Democrat is assured. James H. Egan, William H. Ward and J. G. Gorman, making the Republican nomination, are not on the Washington ballot and are virtually eliminated so far as endorsement by that party is concerned. Egan is the only man on the Bull Moose ticket for council whose name will not appear on the Republican ticket. The councilmanic candidates whose names appear on both the Republican and Democratic tickets are W. S. Behanna, John L. Gans, Thomas J. Hooper, Fred H. Harmering and Frank W. Wright.

John L. Gans refused to be considered for controller. He had already prepared his papers as a candidate for council, at the instance of those most interested in the fusion movement, and expressed the belief that it would be better to stand with that arrangement. This was entirely satisfactory to both the Republicans and the Washington party men interested in an effort to combine on a strong municipal ticket to oppose the Democrats. John H. Work will run for controller and is expected to make a hard fight. He is a West Side resident, an experienced accountant, and popular. His friends declare that he will pull a vote that will surprise the political dopsters. He has strong support within the Washington party, it is asserted, and is acceptable to that wing of the fusion movement.

The refusal of J. G. Gorman to become a candidate leaves B. H. Christner and R. C. Lyon the only men on both Republican and Washington ballots, with C. Roy Hessel on for a Republican nomination. Hessel's candidacy came as a surprise. He will poll a big vote.

Both the Socialists and Prohibitionists have tickets in the field. W. C. Jones and T. Scott Dunn are the mayoralty candidates. Mighty in-coring ward fights are promised, particularly for alderman. The failure of Joseph A. Mason, in the First and Providence M. Huttermore, in the Seventh, to specify the ward for which they are candidates may invalidate their petitions. Mason is a Republican and Huttermore a Democrat. P. Bufano, manager of the foreign department of the Young Trust Company, is one of the few Washington party candidates for a ward office. He wants to be alderman in the First ward. Lawrence Donagan and Joseph A. Mason have also announced, both being Republicans. "Buddy" Mitchell will probably come to be a candidate in the near future. Matthew Monahan is running on the Republican and Democratic tickets.

In the Fourth, Squire W. D. Colborn, a Democrat, wants to be alderman, and seeks the nomination on the Democratic and Bull Moose tickets. Joseph C. Herwick is the Republican aspirant. The Republicans will have a serious contest over alderman in the Seventh ward, on both sides. So far as a cursory examination shows he is the only man running for two offices. There are three candidates for the Republican nomination as mayor: J. Fred Kutz, W. C. Bishop and Andrew J. George. George withdrew yesterday but changed his mind later. It is said he was induced to stay in the fight by Democratic friends who are pained-stricken over the strength developed by the Republican-Bull Moose fusion movement.

"It's a crime that's what it is," a man said last night. "Here are these blankety-blank-blank Bull Mooseers going together with the Republicans. What right have they to do that? They ought to be deathly enemies." The speaker is said to be a Republican, but is closely affiliated with the Democratic cause this year. The Democrats claim to the forlorn hope that the fusion movement would fail flat, but the efforts of both parties to present a solid front to the enemy at the general election is meeting with such success that they are frantic.

It is expected there will be a full political strife for the next week or so. Few of the primary fights promise to be serious, and the candidates will reserve their fire until towards the close of the preliminary campaign. After the primary will come a real campaign.

TWO FIRE ALARMS

Thousands Dollars Damage Done to Residence of Michael Capla.
Fire of unknown origin damaged the house of Michael Capla to the extent of $1,000 last night at 9 o'clock. All members of the family were away and the alarm was sent in from Box 13 by a passerby. The roof was in flames when the fire department arrived but the efficient work of Chief Haddock and his men soon brought the blaze under control. Water and smoke damaged what the fire did not reach. The house was owned by Dave Cohen and was insured.
At 11 o'clock another alarm was sent in Capla who thought the fire had broken out again, but when the fire truck arrived there was no sign of a blaze.

Husak is alleged to have assaulted the older Pickney into unconsciousness, and to have attacked his own daughter when the little girl attempted to interfere. Pickney came here today to make information for Husak's arrest.

BURNS' MEN FEAR A CONFLICT; WANT NO TEST OF RIGHT

Refuse to Attend Their Own Meeting When Eriel Men Show Up.

ARTFUL DODGING OF COUNCILMEN

Having Side-stepped the Possibility of a Clash of Authority, Another Session is Called This Afternoon; Want to be Sure Eriel is Absent.

O. P. Burns issued a call at noon for a special meeting of council to be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon. As Eriel's men are employed during the day, it is unlikely that they can attend.

That the Burns men have no intention of meeting with the Eriel men for sometime to come was clearly indicated last night when they showed the white feather for the fourth time in five days by failing to attend a special meeting of Town Council called by their own leader. Eriel had also called a special meeting and his men were on hand early but the session was adjourned until tonight 7:30 o'clock for the lack of quorum. At 6:30 the time announced by Eriel for last night's meeting spectators lined up at the municipal building and at 7 o'clock when Boss Bill and his right hand were to have met with their clan, more than a hundred men were standing on Arch street and lined the steps of city hall.

Murdered in the council chamber, the Eriel forces threatened for battle. "Protesters" lookouts were sent to the front windows to watch for the approach of the "enemy." This was continued for one half hour, when word was received that the other side had again decided to "back water" and that it would be a waste of time to wait longer. Adjournment soon followed.

Before leaving the chair, Eriel once more called upon the taxpayers to take an interest in the squabble. He asked that a petition addressed to the court be circulated, praying that the "eleven" be removed from office for failure to perform their duties. When seen after the meeting Boss Bill declared that "we'll not meet as long as Eriel wants to warm the chair." He punctured his remarks with emphatic gestures, even the one called by the man they recognize as president. Residents of Snyder street are not particularly interested in the council chamber squabble, but they want the paving of their backyards settled before winter sets in.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 27.—A sentence of death was pronounced upon Leo M. Frank, charged yesterday with murdering Mary Phagan. His execution was set for October 10.
Before sentence was pronounced, Frank's attorneys moved for a new trial on the grounds that several popular demonstrations said to have been heard by the juryman, had prejudiced the case. October 4 was set for argument on this motion.

Three Tickets Are Put in South Connelville Race

If There is Fusion Against Socialists, It Won't Be Visible to the Casual Observer.
Three tickets are in the field at South Connelville and if there was a plan for fusion to defeat the Socialists, it is hardly visible on the surface. ## General Miles, Who Was Bottled Up in Sofa, Returns to America.

GENERAL NELSON A. MILES.

Normal Service Soon is Promise Of West Penn; Repairs Made Fast

The situation at the West Penn power house, where several large generators were put out of commission Monday night by the bursting of a steam pipe, is much improved today. Officials anticipate that the service will be to normal tomorrow, and that all of the factories and manufacturing plants inconvenienced by the accident, will be able to resume operation.

So well in hand was the situation last night that General Manager W. E. Moore returned to Pittsburgh. Supervision of the repairs was placed in the hands of Mr. Moore's chief assistant, J. S. Jenks.

The greatest inconvenience today is being experienced with the trolley service. With the exception of one line, all of the cars are running on one-half schedule. The Dawson line is running as usual, every hour. During the afternoon yesterday, another of the big generators was placed in commission, enabling the company to operate cars from Scottdale to Greensburg every two hours and from Uniontown to Fairbairn and Brownsville.

ASIDE FROM STREET LIGHTING, ELECTRIC

service in town was not affected last night. The street lights were out several hours, being sacrificed to accommodate customers.

Repair work at the plant is progressing rapidly. It has not stopped a moment since the accident occurred. On account of the unusual nature of the mishap, the company has been somewhat handicapped. Many of the new parts of the damaged generators had to be secured in Pittsburgh before the machines could be placed in order, and it was necessary to rewind the coils in all of the generators.

The following statement was issued by the company at noon:

"Another 3250 K. W. turbo-generator was repaired and placed in service last night, enabling us to ease for all of our power consumers and maintain a one-half trolley schedule.
"At noon today one of the 1,600 K. W. units was about ready for service, and very soon afterwards was being made on one of the 6,600 K. V. A. turbo-generators, which, if nothing now unforeseen happens, will bring the service up to normal for tomorrow's operations."

LITTLE CHILD SAVES MOTHER AS REJECTED SUITOR SLASHES HER

Battles With Man as He Tries to Cut Her Throat With Razor.

NEAR-TRAGEDY AT OHIOPILE

George Snyder is Alleged to Have Made a Murderous Attack Upon Woman Who Rejected His Attention; Constable Seeks Him Here.

Attempting to murder Florence Largent as she slept, George Snyder, a rejected suitor, was foiled by the woman's little girl, who struggled with the crazed man until Andrew Hall, a Civil War veteran who lived in the Largent home, forced the man off, according to the story told Squire Haddock. Veir, who issued a warrant for Snyder's arrest on charges of felonious cutting, with intent to kill. Miss Largent was frightfully cut by the razor which the man used, a wound extending along her throat from the chin to the collar bone. It will not prove fatal. The attack took place at Ohiopile.

The victim of the attack lives with her mother. She was the wife of a man named Silbaugh, but they have not lived together for some time. Their little child is with the mother. Mrs. Silbaugh resumed her maiden name. For some time past Snyder, who is also known as George Danberry, has been pressing his suit, but made little progress. It is said that Miss Largent and her mother were both opposed to his visits and finally ordered that they cease. This is said to have angered the man.

The attack took place Monday night. It was Snyder's second attempt to enter the house, the family declares. He broke a pane of glass in one of the windows and gained entrance in that manner. Everyone in the house was asleep, but the little girl, sleeping with the mother, was awakened by Snyder's approach. She saw the flash of the razor and screamed. At the same time she grappled with him. In spite of her efforts, Snyder succeeded in felling the girl, the wound upon the neck which had injured him, but at that time Andrew Hall, an aged man, reached the room and grappled with the man. There was a struggle, in which the older man was overpowered. He then escaped.

Both Hall and Mrs. Largent made information against the man and Constable E. A. Jackson of Ohiopile was here looking for him today. Snyder or Danberry, had been around Ohiopile for sometime past, but nothing is known of his previous residence or connections.

Total Production in 1912 Nearly 250,000,000 Short Tons.

The combined production of anthracite and bituminous coal in Pennsylvania amounted in 1912 to 246,227,056 short tons, valued at $350,975,125, against 235,215,220 tons, valued at $321,547,250, in 1911, according to J. W. Parker, of the United States Geological Survey, who compiled the figures in co-operation with the state Geographic and Geologic Survey Commission. The increase in quantity was 11,009,836 short tons, or 4.7 per cent, and the gain in value, $28,427,875, or 9 per cent. In 1911 the larger percentage of increase in value was due to an increase in the production of anthracite and a decrease in the output of the lower-priced soft coal. The total quantity of bituminous coal produced in the State in 1912 was 151,467,488 short tons, valued at $169,779,497, and that of anthracite coal 94,759,568 short tons valued at $177,472,428. In 1912 both anthracite and bituminous values increased in larger ratio than the increase in tonnage. On account of the suspension of operations on April 1 the production of anthracite in 1912 was less than in 1911 by 5,438,821 long tons in quantity and by $2,670,021 in value. The production of bituminous coal, on the other hand, increased 17,394,231 short tons in quantity and $22,515,715 in value. The average value per ton increased for both grades, anthracite from $2.17 to $2.36 per long ton and bituminous coal from $1.01 to $1.09 per short ton. The production of bituminous coal in Pennsylvania in 1912 exceeded that of anthracite by 77,707,920 short tons, or 81 per cent, but the value of the latter exceeded that of the former by $2,670,021.

A somewhat unusual comparison is presented in the statistics covering the labor employed in the anthracite and bituminous coal mines of Pennsylvania in 1912. Notwithstanding the decrease in production of anthracite, more men were employed in the anthracite mines in 1912 than in 1911, whereas in the bituminous mines the production showed a material increase with fewer employees. The number of men employed in the anthracite mines in 1912 was 171,040, against 172,647 in 1911. The bituminous workers numbered 165,141 in 1912 and 168,149 in 1911. The average number of working days in the anthracite region, however, decreased from 246 in 1911 to 217 in 1912, while the bituminous mines the average working time increased from 237 days in 1911 to 255 days in 1912. The average yearly production per man in the anthracite region in 1912 was 141 long or 159 short tons, and in the bituminous fields, 940 short tons. The total number of men employed in all coal mines of Pennsylvania in 1912 was 236,171, against 240,797 in 1911.

The Australian Appetite.

An Australian paper gives some surprising statistics of what the average Australian eats. Apparently he has the best appetite, if not the best digestion, of any human being on the planet. He eats every year 294 pounds of meat, which works out at an average of two sheep and one-fifth of a bullock for every man, woman and baby in Australia. He eats more than twice as much meat as the average Englishman, three times as much as the average Frenchman and four times as much as the average German or Swede. He eats, in addition, about three and three-quarters hundredweight of wheat, two and a half hundredweight of potatoes and almost one hundredweight of sugar. If he is a Tasmanian he eats a quarter of a ton of potatoes in a year.

Ex-King Manuel of Portugal Weds His Fair Princess in Germany on Sept. 4

Ex-King MANUEL WITH HIS BRIDE-ELECT AND HIS MOTHER.

BERLIN, Aug. 27.—European royalty was mightily interested in the wedding of ex-King Manuel of Portugal and the Princess Augusta Victoria, which was set for September 1. The young ousted king has had the sympathy of those who move in the ranks of the nobility, and they still hope that he may again be placed in power in his native country. Every precaution was taken to guard Manuel from possible attack on the part of fanatic republicans, who it was feared, might make his wedding day the occasion of a tragedy. In the accompanying picture the ex-king is shown with his bride and his mother, Queen Amelia. Manuel is twenty-three years old and the princess one year his junior.

Keeping the Body in Repair

Nature intended that the body should do its own repairing—and it would do so were it not for the fact that most of us live other than a natural life.

Nature didn't intend that we should wear corsets, tight collars or shoes, nor live in badly ventilated and draughty houses, nor eat and drink some of the things that we do, nor ride in street cars when we should walk. The consequence is that the body when it gets out of order must look for outside help to make the necessary repairs. For weak stomachs and the indigestion or dyspepsia resulting, and the multitude of diseases following therefrom, no medicine can be more adaptable as a cure than DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

This famous Doctor's prescription has been recommended for over 40 years, and is today just as big a success. Restores a healthy appetite. Cleanses the blood. Strengthens the nerves. Regulates stomach and liver. Demand the original.

Hoboken, N. J.
By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Slaves."
Hoboken is one of the most extensively and least successfully advertised cities in the world.
For many years humorists and actors have spread the name of Hoboken over the country. Everyone knows Hoboken, Kalamazoo, Kokomo and Valoo, Neb., by name, but no one seems to have taken the trouble to inquire further about them.
Hoboken is carefully hidden in Eastern New Jersey, under the well known Palisades, which rise back of the city to a height of 200 feet and render the task of selling suburban lots a very discouraging one. In front of the city is the Hudson river, with New York looming terrifically on the other side. South of Hoboken is Jersey City, and Westhoken blocks it to the North. There is nowhere left for Hoboken to row except straight up or down Hoboken has chosen the latter and its subway system is growing every year.
Hoboken contains one square mile and has managed to squeeze 70,000 people into this space, though Des Moines, Iowa, needs 66 square miles to house a few thousand more. When a Hoboken citizen wants a flower garden he buys it in a pot and puts it on his window sill.
Hoboken is visited daily by many thousands of New Yorkers, but few of them come to the surface to breathe, preferring to change cars underground. Many steamship lines have piers on the water front and Hoboken has received some of the nation's most distinguished visitors, but none of them has ever tarried long enough to buy a postage stamp or a souvenir card. Hoboken is also the terminus of two great railroad systems, but the passengers are carefully deposited in underground trains or ferries and have no chance to admire the beauties of the old stone pavement along the river front. If Hoboken had small-pot it could not be more effectively quantified from the public.

And yet Hoboken is a historic old city with plenty of past. As early as 1650 the Dutch raised vegetables in the Hoboken bottoms for New Amsterdam. In the first part of this century the "Glynn Field" of Hoboken were yielded by thousands of New Yorkers every week. However, they have long since been removed to the Broadway roof gardens.
"For many years humorists and actors have spread the name of Hoboken over the country."
Hoboken turns out some of the best engineers in the world from Stevens Institute, and some of the most magnificent mosquitoes known in natural history from salt marshes back of the city. It can be visited with impunity and even profit and some of the New Yorkers who are little out on expeditions to shut the mysteries of Thibet and Kinnchucka had better take a ferry and try to discover Hoboken.

First Announcement of Autumn Goods.

The Union Supply Company, as usual, are the first in the field with new autumn goods. It seems funny to make an announcement of fall goods at this season of the year, during the very warm weather, but it is absolutely necessary nowadays for good merchants to prepare in advance of the seasons. The clearance rummage sales are over; every department is being filled up with brand new goods, and we are ready to do business now on fall lines.
Watch the Union Supply Company's advertisements; watch our daily announcements at the stores. We have many good things for you.

PARTY ENROLLMENT.
Harrisburg Telegraph.

One has only to glance at the political situation as it stands to understand why it is that certain newspapers and bosses are so busily misrepresenting and slandering the party enrollment act.
Proposed by a reform Democrat and championed by Washington party leaders in the Legislature as another nail in the coffin of "boss rule," this act was in every sense a progressive measure and by the efficient concurrence of Republican members, became entirely nonpartisan.

Its first purpose was to protect independent parties from being ruled at the primaries by the parties and to prevent the older parties from preempting and using titles at the polls, such as "Progressive," "Unit Moore," etc., with a view to entrapping votes they would not otherwise get.
It is the times do not appear to be propitious for independent parties. Voters who were confidently expected to enroll as members of the Washington party are announcing their intention to register as Republicans. Not only is this so in Dauphin and Cumberland counties, but in every other county of the state.

Hence, the loud complaints from the remnants of the Plattsburgh and from Democratic bosses who had hoped by this means to keep the Republican party divided against itself.
So long as we have party government party action is to be expected. It is not a fair deal all around.

It is Washington party voters are returning to the Republican ranks, that is their own affair. They have perfect right to do it, and they are more than welcome in the old camp, but no one can compel them to write their names down as Republicans.

BUREAU OF MINES.
Pittsburg Sun.

Authority has been granted by Congress for the work of building the new plant for the Bureau of Mines of Pittsburg. The resolution authorizes the bureau to accept financial aid from the State of Pennsylvania and others. The latter reference is to the Carnegie Technical Schools, which own property adjoining the Mabee site, where the bureau is to locate, and which are willing to fill part of the ground in the interest of both institutions. The interest of the technical schools is not merely one of public spirit. They expect to benefit from having the mines bureau located so near them. They desire to make communication between the two easy in order that the technical students may have the benefit of the tests and demonstrations to be made by the Government Institution.

In securing the removal of the mine laboratories from Arsenal Park to the site formerly owned by the board of education, both the technical schools and the University of Pittsburg were kept in mind. The bureau of mines is conducting experiments that are of great value to the students in both of these institutions and the nearness of their location creates a community of interest that should be of value to all three. Pittsburg is developing into a center of technical education and of physical experiment. Its great workshops and the mines that are the center of the whole structure, but the grouping here of places for higher technical education and of physical laboratories on the largest scale, under Government auspices, means a vast stride forward. Let the good work be pushed.

TWO JUDGES DIVERGE.
Pittsburg Post.

Two judges of the courts of common pleas have decided the non-partisan law for third-class cities. Conneltsville. These are Judge Stephens of Cambria county and Judge Straum of Luzerne county. Their decisions are opposed to the decision of Judge Van Swearingen of Fayette county, which held that the non-partisan law was unconstitutional. This should be done without delay to prevent disfranchisement of voters in some of the counties. The judges deciding that the affirmative law, not filed opinion, but the presumption is that they hold classification of cities for voting purposes to be legal, the decision of Judge Van Swearingen being based on the contention that classification is legal only for municipal purposes.

While classification of cities for municipal purposes under the Wallace act has been upheld by the highest courts, that result was not achieved until every resource of litigation had been exhausted. The apparent intent of the Constitution of 1874 was that all cities should be governed alike. In sustaining the Wallace act the courts held that this apparent intent was impossible of execution and so permitted classification. Thus it may be seen that the contention of the judges of Cambria and Luzerne may have some foundation and the necessity for a decision of the higher courts is imperative. No time should be lost in making an appeal from one of the other of the three counties that have made decisions.

How Valuable Road Is to Community.

KNOCKED TRAVELING MEN OUT

Mill Town Is to Have a New Nickle-down: Large New Building Also Being Built in East Scottdale: Notes of News of the Busy Mill Town.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTSDALE, August 27.—The accident to the power house machinery of the West Penn on Tuesday showed what a great convenience and necessity the line are and the facilities for travel in and out of town they afford. To Greensburg and Mount Pleasant there was no travel at all, except by driving or automobile. To Connellsville the service was uncertain. The travel between Scottdale and Greensburg and intermediate points was diverted to the railroad and also meant a long day in the country capital. The superb and regular half hour service of the West Penn is noticed the most when some accident interrupts it. At other times people take its convenience as a matter of course. The hard hit were the traveling men who had their schedules based on half hour car service all disturbed and rendered useless.

NEW NICKLEDOWN
Contractor John M. Pyle has begun work on the remodeling of the Kelly & Cook building on Pittsburg street, lately occupied by a store. Coulter, a well known actor.

HUGE OVERCHARGES ALLEGED

People Pay Private Makers of Ammunition Almost Double.

WASHINGTON, August 27.—Overcharges for army ammunition "unbelievable to the average citizen," according to Representative Tamm of Illinois, inspired him yesterday to introduce a bill providing for an appropriation of $1,000,000 for enlarging the arsenal at Rock Island, Ill.

Tamm says the government paid approximately $25 for shrapnel shells for field guns when the Funkhord arsenal at Philadelphia could turn them out for $12.50. He also asserted that the same arsenal turned out ball cartridges for the service rifle at less than $10 a thousand, while private contractors charged the government more than $25.

Hygiene For Business Women.
First of all, seven or eight hours of sleep are necessary and if possible nine. Always have fresh air circulating in the bedroom. Cold weather need never be an excuse for tightly shut windows. No one who has honestly tried sleeping in a thoroughly ventilated room will willingly go back to the slow suffocation caused by the want of oxygen.

If after a day's trying ordeal the body is tired, the mind sore and discouraged and the spirit drooping, eat sparingly of something very wholesome and simple that is easily digested. Relax for half an hour, read a light book or stretch out in some comfortable chair, then sponge the body over with the following lotion, which will soothe the worn-out nerves, cool the limbs and induce sleep: Sea salt, four ounces; spirits of camphor, two ounces; spirits of ammonia, two ounces; pure alcohol, eight ounces.

Add sufficient water to make a full quart. Dissolve the salt in the hot water and let it stand until cool. Pour the spirits of camphor and ammonia into the alcohol, add the salt water and shake well, then bottle for use. Wet the body with this, then rub vigorously until the skin glows.

Whether the cold bath or the warm bath is taken, it is purely a question of individual taste and pleasure. If the cold water is chilling and there is no reaction after the friction the cold bath should not be indulged in. The French dermatologists object to the habitual cold plunge, preferring the warm bath with the use of a cooler spray afterward and a final rubdown with a toilet vinegar or astringent water. But this again is a matter of taste.

The next most important factor in the business woman's care of herself is exercise. Of course it is often impossible for her to take very much outdoor exercise except on Sundays and holidays, but a few moments in the morning given to physical culture or a few simple exercises adapted to her particular requirements will perform wonders.

Work will never injure looks or health if even ordinary care is bestowed on our bodies and if we follow conscientiously and carefully as far as possible the simple, homely rules of health. Physical culture is the result of long years of thought and experience and is designed to develop and does develop every muscle of the body. It gives pulse and physical authority. Select three or four simple exercises and rise fifteen minutes earlier. It may seem trying at first, but after a few efforts the results will be so gratifying that the fifteen minutes given up to these exercises will become a pleasant habit.

Diet is another important factor in the case of the business woman should give to herself. The first and most essential point in the matter of diet for the beauty seeker is that it should be plain and wholesome, not flavored with rich sauces or condiments, simple, nutritious and, above all, well cooked. Breakfast should be light, but simple, and the midday meal be more solid. For the hard worked business man and for the great army of women toilers it essentially applies that this meal should be wholesome, but not heavy—a repast that will give as much nourishment and stamina as possible in small bulk. Begin the day with a glass of hot or cold water; then the rest of the meals can be taken dry. Drink several glasses of pure water between meals.

No woman should ever go to bed hungry. A light luncheon of wafer and warm milk, hot water and brown bread or even a few dates is enough to start the craving and induce sleep. The mistake is to eat heartily and hurriedly, imposing upon the stomach a full meal of half-digested food.

No food Drinks For Beauty.
Any girl who values or who is trying to cultivate a good complexion should not drink ice cold drinks of any kind. Plenty of cool water should be sipped, and two quarts such as ice much, at least during weather, says the Philadelphia.

Some girls declare they never drink much water. To those I would say then it is high time they began. Just as the body requires to be flushed externally by bathing, so does it need internal flushing, and plenty of cool, fresh water will do this better than medicine. If you are no water drinker try it for the summer and note the difference in your complexion a few months later. But do not be like the young girl who said, "Oh, I tried it, but it's no good." When asked how long she had tried, she said, "A couple of weeks." She might better not have tried at all. Another girl said that she was just becoming discouraged when one day she noticed how soft and satiny her skin appeared, where formerly it was muddy and sallow. When asked how long it had been since she started to drink water regularly, she replied, "About a year," and added that she really thought it worth while to cultivate the habit of drinking water. She realized, as many girls do not, that all the old refuse had to be got rid of first before any change for the better could take place, and naturally, this takes time.

THE FORBIDDEN FRUIT.

Maybe It Was a Quince Eve Ate in the Garden of Eden.

Why and how it has happened that the apple has been spoken of as the fruit that was forbidden in the Garden of Eden is one of the great puzzles of biblical scholars. The fact is that in Genesis III, where the incident of the eating of this fruit of the "tree of knowledge of good and evil" is mentioned, no name whatever is given to this fruit. All that is said is: "And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat." (Verses 6.)

In fact, scholars doubt very seriously whether it was the apple at all. They suggest that all evidence points to the having been the quince, the fragrant of which was held in the highest esteem by the Orientals. Another point in favor of the quince is that it is the fruit which was sacred to Venus, the goddess of love, and in a great many of the ancient writings the quince is very frequently mentioned in this manner. In Babylonian tablet took the place of Venus in the Roman mythology, and it should be remembered that the story of the creation originated with the Babylonians. All evidence seems to point away from the apple having been the "forbidden fruit," and toward the quince as having been that fruit of the "tree of knowledge of good and evil."—Tit-Bits.

DREAMING OF FALLING.

What Happened in the One Known Case of Hitting the Ground.

Probably all of us have dreamed that we were falling down the back stairs or a high cliff, then gliding swimmingly off into space. This dream gives the name to a condition known as falling dream, or a fast-acting falling dream. We are worried for the instant about what will happen when we strike bottom, but we never strike. Either we are off on another dream before that disastrous event happens or we awake.

There is an old superstition that if one ever hits the ground the shock would kill the dreamer, but this is difficult to prove, for, as our Irish neighbor might remark, the only way it could be proved would be to have the dreamer wake up dead and tell us about it.

Of the thousands who wrote letters a few years ago to an Englishman who had published an essay on the subject but one correspondent had dreamed that the fall continued clear to the ground. This woman dreamed she fell off a tall rock. When she hit the ground she was broken into small bits, but a sort of second self gathered up the pieces and glued them together, making a piece of humanity as good as new. This dream, however, is unique. —Chicago Tribune.

Mrs. Diana Belais Pleads For Animals.

MRS. DIANA BELAIS.

The anti-vivisectionists of New York, headed by the president, Mrs. Diana Belais, have been watching the professors of the Rockefeller institution, when they accuse of extreme cruelty to animals in the pursuit of knowledge by way of their experiments. This attitude is said to be doing the most original work in the world in tracing the cause of disease and finding cures and is destined to be the great center of research. It is consequently too bad that anything should interfere with the work except that which is truly humanitarian. No doubt investigation, now begun in earnest, will fix the blame.

PREVENTING RUST.

Electric Light Means For Keeping Out Dampness.

Families deprive themselves of the pleasure of having their piano in the summer home when the latter is located on the coast or in a climate where dampness ruins the piano strings and puts the instrument all a jangle, eventually ruining it.

Owners of such homes may be glad to know how Americans on the isthmus of Panama, where a similar condition exists, are able to keep their pianos unharmed. Into each instrument is dropped an electric light bulb, which is kept burning, sending a gentle warmth through the piano and main taining it dry and in tune.

Similar in principle is the cupboard lined with canvas and heated with two electric bulbs, in which cupboard are kept wearing apparel, particularly shoes and cloth garments, that would absorb dampness and become molded. At the seashore and other places where rust corrodes articles of jewelry and even safety pins and the little brass "stickers" that are no good at all when rusty are kept in good condition if left in talcum powder when not in use.

It is a good plan to leave an expensive watch at home when going to a race including place, as the delicate mechanism is soon affected, and the owner remarks pettishly that her watch "always gets out of order down here."

For the Rainy Day in the Auto.
When starting off for a day's trip strenuous objections are always made by the average woman to taking the heavy rubber blankets, even though she may realize fully that the rain may descend and the floods come and beat upon that auto. She dislikes those blankets not only because they are heavy, but because they are ugly and malodorous—two things offensive to her feminine soul.

Now, however, she may rejoice, for a blanket comes which is made of a rubberized material that is pretty, light in weight and hasn't a bit of a "rubbery" smell. It is a good looking thing, for it is of a pretty shade of tan and is trimmed with bands and conventional corner designs of stitched velvet of a darker shade than the blanket itself.

It has a separate backing of cloth which adds to the warmth of the robe, but not to its weight. Altogether it is a most welcome substitute for the clumsy and heavy rubber blanket.

Aspiration sees but one side of every question, pessimism many.—Lowell.

USING SUDDEN WEALTH.

What Would You Do if You Fell Heir to Three Hundred Millions?

Some time ago a man was "knocking" Andrew Carnegie for "the crazy idea of putting up all those libraries," and finally for lack of something else to say, I asked him casually: "Well, what would you do if you had 300 millions dumped into your lap?"

He gulped once or twice, went into a sort of trance, and finally said: "Why I'd—why, I'd—blamed 'I know'—and then we talked about something else. Since then the subject has crossed my mind many times, and I am not sure that the proper solution is any nearer. If you ask the question of ten of your friends, you will at first get a funny answer from each of them.

"Buy me a yacht and travel all the time." "Build the finest home in the country." "Buy all the pork and beans in the world and throw them to the subject," etc., these being a few of the actual answers given me. Afterward, on reflection, each one will really try to say what he would do, but the human mind finds it difficult to comprehend such an amount, or even the interest on it, which at 5 per cent would be $15,000,000 yearly.—International Magazine.

The World's Gypsies.

The gypsies have passed under a variety of names, arising either from their supposed original country or from the old English Egyptian, the Spanish Gitanos and the Magyar Pharus nepek (Pharusia people) all point to an Egyptian origin. The Scandinavian Gipsies identify themselves with the Mongolian hordes which terrorized early Europe, while the French Bohemians suggest yet another country as their cradle.

As to the names bestowed by their supposed character, the Arab boldly calls them harami (a villain), the Dutchman boymen, or heathens, and the German takes this name from their complexion and calls them karsch, or swarthy. A charter of William the Lion, as early as the twelfth century mentions their Scotch name of tinklers which is commonly supposed to be a corruption of tinkler, although possibly the substitution of "i" for "z" has produced this form of the Italian zingaro, one of the most widespread of gypsy appellations.—London Spectator.

Summer Clothing For Baby.

In summer the baby's clothing needs especially to be light in weight and loose fitting, says Good House. It goes without saying that it should be clean and sweet. The young child is exceedingly sensitive to change of temperature, and his clothing should be subject to the surrounding atmosphere. In the cold of the morning he needs warm garments, but swathed in flannel in the heat of the day he becomes overheated and perspires to excess. It takes time and thought to watch his comfort in this matter, but it does much toward insuring freedom from disease.

Way to Plant Fine Seed.

Have the earth spaded carefully and break the clods into fine pieces. Scatter the seed in with a flower bed earth. Seed is also good because it keeps dirt from becoming too compact. Having raked the bed smooth take an old sieve and sift the rich dirt over the whole bed. Put your flower seeds into a pepper box and shake them evenly over the surface, and do not attempt to cover the seed with dirt. Instead, take a block or trowel and press the seed firmly into the soil. It is best to have the ground slightly damp. This makes a smooth flower bed. The plants will come up evenly and fewer will have to be weeded out.

For the Girl Who Wears Flowers.
When purchasing violets, sweet peas, pansies, daisies or any flowers that are worn with a thin wrapping about their stems, suggest to your florist that he wrap a small amount of moist cotton or damp moss around the stems under the thin foil. Thus the cry "I love to wear flowers, but they die so soon," is silenced, for flowers protected in this way can be worn on the warmest day with little signs of wilting.—Suburban Life.

Swimmer Finds Big Pearl.
While swimming in South Fork, a tributary of the Sangamon river, Oliver Wolf of Edinburg, Ill., dug up with a handful of sand a pearl that weighed fifty-five grains, according to H. Fleming, a jeweler of that town. Fleming valued the pearl at $1,500.

Sarcasm.

He had just reached the philosophical stage when he slipped into a restaurant between bars for a bit to eat. He ordered. Then he sat staring ahead, quietly thoughtful in expression, and waiting.

It is admitted that he did some waiting too. What happened to his order couldn't be understood outside the peculiar convolutions of a restaurant kitchen, but he spent half an hour sitting there, staring ahead of him.

At last it came. As the waitress put the order before him he started from his deep study as if he had forgotten he had an order coming. Then, looking up at the fair transporter of edibles, he said:

The Sleep of Horses.

When the horse sleeps, it is said that one ear is directed forward, why is not known. A writer in the English Medicalist thinks this is to guard against danger, being a survival of its originally wild habits. He says: "Watch a horse sleep through the window of his stable and make a faint noise at the front. That ear will be all attention, and probably the other will fly around sharply to assist. Now let him go to sleep again and make the same noise to the left. The forward ear still will keep guard, with possibly a light flick round, only to resume its former position."

"Because, mister," replied the boy, "it was your dime I lost."—Judge.

Changes of Climate.

A scientist who recently investigated the causes of secular variations in temperature at the earth's surface thinks that they are more probably due to changes in the amount of carbonic acid in the atmosphere than to variations in the heat of the sun. If the amount of carbonic acid that the air now contains was diminished a little more than half the mean temperature all over the earth would, it is stated, drop about eight degrees, which would be sufficient to bring on another glacial period. On the other hand, an increase of carbonic acid between two and three times its present amount would raise the mean temperature 15 degrees and renew the hot times of theocene epoch.—Boston Post.

HOLTON OF THE NAVY

A STORY OF THE FREEDOM OF CUBA

"Now, you see," he commanded, "take me right up to Mr. Rodriguez's room, will you?"

On reaching the third floor, the boy led the way down the hall, stopping before a door at the end of the corridor.

"Here it is, sir," Holton gave the lad a coin and rattled his knuckles against the panel.

The door was opened by an intelligent-looking Cuban, who conducted the caller into a luxuriously furnished reception-room and asked him to sit down.

"Ah, señor Holton. You honor me," he murmured.

"Then you are Mr. Rodriguez?" asked Holton abruptly.

"Yes, yes," responded the man, who was clad in a well-made suit of straw with a crimson sash about his waist. "I repeat, I am flattered at your visit."

"I am glad of that," Holton responded stiffly; but in response to a note stating that matters of interest to a Miss La Tossa were pressing, will you do me the kindness to enlighten me as to the manner in which my acquaintance with Miss La Tossa interests you?"

The Spaniard bowed. "You are direct, like all Americans," he said. "Well, be it so."

He took from a table a bottle of very rare Amelco Oloroso, and poured a little in a glass. He pushed it toward Holton.

"I drink," he said, smilingly, "to Miss La Tossa, and may she have a most comfortable trip on the Gnat."

Holton left his glass poised. "What on earth are you talking about?" he cried.

"Miss La Tossa, as you know," the Spaniard said, "is in Tampa."

"Yes, I know that," said Holton. "She came down on my train."

"It is not good for her to be here," the Spaniard said, "the climate is dangerous."

"No, not the climate," was the reply, so sharp and so spirited, so much in contrast to Rodriguez's previous manner of speech that the naval officer started. "Not the climate. She is engaged in activities here that your government regards as most pernicious."

"Yes, and your own government?" came back Holton.

"My government," Rodriguez smiled genially, "happens to be your government."

So saying, he handed Holton a paper which, as the officer read it, convinced him beyond question or cavil that the attack of the United States States Department, whose name was synonymous to every Spaniard or loyal Cuban.

He was, in truth, none other than Ramon del Rey, a spy, with headquarters in Washington, who, although a naturalized American, had done more effective, if unobtrusive, work for Cuba Libre than most other Cuban patriots.

Holton rose and, with a smile of genuine pleasure, thrust out his hand. "I have heard of you," he said; "and I'm glad to know you."

"Thank you, I, too, have heard of you. But to business. Miss La Tossa must not stay here, and yet her removal must be brought about quietly, for various reasons. It is best that Miss La Tossa be transported at once to Cuba on the Gnat, very quietly and secretly, and now I bid you good day and thank you."

"Thank you," and Holton left, wondering if the man realized all he was thanking him for.

He lost no time in making his way to the Gnat, where he astonished Conroy and Howard by summoning them to the cabin.

"Is there any way," he said, "in which this room can be made more comfortable for a young lady?"

"Neither of the two men spoke, regarding Holton with open-mouthed astonishment."

"It's this way," smiled Holton. "The Gnat's been ordered to take a young Cuban woman over to Cuba, and—and I want her to be comfortable."

The faces of the two men radiated curiosity, but Holton said nothing further to enlighten them.

Promptly at seven o'clock that evening a closed carriage drove rapidly down the long wharf and stopped abreast the gangway leading to the Gnat. The door was swung open, and Del Rey bowed in a courtly manner to the girl. "I trust you will have a pleasant voyage, and I beg to apologize for my seeming reticence."

The captive declined to reply, and turned her back as the two men retraced their steps up the gangway.

A few minutes later the diminutive warship was churning her way out through the bay.

Holton turned to the girl, who stood disconsolately, viewing the receding shore.

"I am sorry, Miss La Tossa, but you will recognize, of course, that I am doing nothing but obeying orders, which are to see that you are very comfortable and agreeably entertained until you reach Cuba."

She evidently had determined not to talk to her captor, but he turned his mind to womanlike suddenness.

"I shall thank you if I am comfortable, but I shall thank you still more if you give over any idea of entertaining me. You may be sure that the less I see of you the better I shall be pleased."

"You will follow me, Miss La Tossa," he said, with sudden stiffening of manner, "I'll show you your cabin."

The dark came rolling across the sea. It was a wonderful night, a night spangled with constellations and undulating black velvet waters, which picked up the little torpedo boat, bold tug and her then sending her sliding silently down long inclines, at the bottom of which she seemed to nestle a moment before her screw kicked her up another quivering hill.

Some time later the lights of a craft which had been following astern of the Gnat began to creep closer and closer aboard, and dark clouds of smoke, billowing from three great funnels, blotting out the northern horizon.

Holton saw the vessel, too, and easily recognized her as a torpedo boat destroyer. His only doubt was as to her nationality.

This was speedily settled, for suddenly Ardola lights began to blink from the bridge, interpreting which Holton learned that the destroyer Bainbridge wished to speak to the Gnat.

In a few minutes the Bainbridge whistled up and the sharp voice of Lieutenant Commander Jameson sounded from the bridge.

"On board the Gnat?"

"Aye, aye!" yelled Holton. There followed a silence which lasted until the destroyer slid her high, sharp bow and conical forward deck alongside the little torpedo boat. Jameson jumped aboard and after returning Holton's salute he said formally:

"I have orders to take a Miss La Tossa from the Gnat and land her at—well, never mind where."

"Very good, sir. Any orders for me?"

"Yes, here they are." Jameson took an envelope from his overcoat-pocket and handed it to Holton. "Now, then, I'll take the girl."

But the girl, in fact, did not wait to be taken. She stepped forward most gracefully, and addressing Jameson, said:

"I am ready; I am quite happy at my change of prisons and my shift of jailers."

"Ha, ha!" laughed the prosaic Jameson, nudging Holton in the ribs, and offering his arm to the girl who walked up a small ladder to the deck of the destroyer without so much as a glance at Holton.

With a blast of her siren the Bainbridge shot on her way to Cuba, while the Gnat made a long swoop and turned upon her course.

While this maneuver was in progress Holton, still flushing with vexation, ripped open the envelope and read the latest phase of what he had come to regard as a game of battles and shuttles.

Shorn of technical verbiage, the orders which were signed by the new assistant secretary, Allen, instructed Holton to lose himself and the Gnat among the small isolated keys of the coast until such time as the transports were gathered at Port Tampa, when he was then to guard them from night attacks which might come sneaking in under cover of the darkness from seaward.

CHAPTER VI.

Action Indeed.

Holton's orders were to keep himself and the Gnat hidden, and this he did so effectively that to all intents and purposes he might just as well have gone down with his little craft and crew in Nicholas Channel.

At length, when he had begun to think he was insured for life in this blinding little byway, came the welcome orders to proceed to Port Tampa, there to carry out instructions already in his possession, namely, the collection of transports from attack by water. With light hearts the three men got their craft under way, ran up the bay, and in good time drew in under the counter of a steamship, lying near the end of the long slip.

It was as though a magician's wand had been waved over the port. Along the slip lay transport after transport, nearly a score of them, the black smoke of others draping the horizon in long, grimy clouds. Freight trains were rumbling up and down the tracks, and officers of various departments of the army, their shirts open at the throat, dusty, sweaty, hot, hurried everywhere.

"It surely looks like business," chuckled Holton as he slipped on his uniform coat over a marine's drab shirt and prepared to visit the hotel where the life at the hotel was made more brilliant by the arrival of Shafter and his staff, but Holton, who had had all the brilliancy and inactivity he wanted, found himself praying fervently for orders that would send him out as officer on one of the vessels of Admiral Sampson's North Atlantic Squadron. But no such orders came, and Holton had just about stung his mind to a weary grind to last at least several months longer, when something occurred to change very materially the attitude of the government in regard to the movement of the troops to Tampa.

In short, Admiral Sampson called that after a mysterious voyage across the Atlantic ocean and Caribbean sea, Admiral Cervera and his squadron of battleships and cruisers were bottled up in Santiago. He could not attack them because of the forts and mines, and he requested that troops be sent at once to co-operate with the navy from the land side.

It was then that the Secretary of War wired General Shafter to proceed forthwith to Cuba.

Placards laden with General Randolph's artillery rumbled down the slip, and the guns which belatedly yawning ports in the sides of the transports; provisions, supplies of all sorts bore them company, and no one doubted any longer that at last the army had received its bid to the field of battle.

A new strain was put upon Holton, for now, if at any time, attempts at the destruction of the transports would be made, there being no longer any over as to the intentions of the United States government. Then arrived the day when the boys in blue came in from Lakeland, and, with cheers and shouts, marched aboard the long line of transports, from whose funnels clouds of smoke were belching.

Holton's crew had been augmented by four extra seamen, sent to him from Key West, and each night they stood guard with him on various parts of the deck, rifles in their hands and navy coats strapped about their waists.

Toward midnight most of the noise, the shouting of orders, the rattling of tackle, the tramp of feet, died away.

He saw a sputter of sparks. Quick as thought he turned.

"Mon of the Gnat, overboard!" he roared.

Shouting action to his words, he dived swiftly into the dark waters, and the next instant the Port of Tampa was startled by an explosion which shattered the windows of the hotel and brought thousands rushing out into the night.

Holton's first thought, as soon as his head emerged above the water, was to make sure of his position, which fortunately was not ten yards from that occupied by the Gnat. He made her in several strokes, and was fished over the side by a sailor.

The man at the wheel had lighted a red flare, and by this means the other three men in the water were guided to their vessel. Beyond a few bruises, all were uninjured.

In the meantime Holton was not too busy to notice that the explosion had thrown the harbor into wild confusion. Rowboats were everywhere, having sprung on the water as though by magic, and the decks of the transports were alive with figures. Searchlights were flashing in every direction, and men's voices arose in a babel of confusion.

As soon as practicable Holton changed his water-soaked clothing and went ashore, leaving the Gnat to continue her patrol.

There was little doubt in his mind that the men in the vessel were bent on the destruction of the transports, that the explosives aboard her were to be placed under the sterns of a dozen or more of the steamships, and then set off by a single electric spark.

Holton believed that the tug had gone as near to the slip as she intended to go when he discovered her, and that further operations were to have been accomplished from the row boat towing him false. But no, that could not be, for in his first glance he remembered that some stars on the horizon had been blotted out by the object. That certainly was suggestive of its tangibility.

Holton went to the little bridge, and, pointing out the spot where he had last seen the moving blot on the night, ordered the Gnat to head in that direction at half-speed.

For five minutes the little craft proceeded out into the bay, and then suddenly Holton made out clearly the outlines of a small tugboat, with a skiff in tow.

"Heave to, or I'll fire!" cried Holton.

Still no reply, but the propeller of the tug could be heard churning the water in excess speed.

Without further word, Holton snatched the rifle from the sailor's hand, took quick aim, and let drive. As a response, there came five shots in rapid succession from the tug the bullets rattling through the Gnat's funnel and ventilators upon his shoulder.

"Full speed ahead!" cried Holton, in full exultation at hearing for the first time the whistle of bullets discharged in anger. "Right into her," he added, forgetting of his boat's "in bow"—"run her down!"

When within a hundred feet the Gnat sheered off, made a detour, and rounded to in front of the tug's bow.

"Stop!" yelled Holton, leveling the rifle. "Stand by that machine gun," he added in a low tone to the man at his side.

The tug stopped abruptly, but not a sound came from her.

"What boat is that?" called Holton.

No reply.

As the bow of the torpedo boat raised against the fondle of the stranger, Holton's pistol in hand leaped over her guards to the deck three of her men followed.

Then, as though by magic shadowy forms arose. A dark figure moved swiftly at Holton's side, and as his revolver blazed in the man's face, he felt the sharp impact of a weighted club upon his shoulder.

Another man seized him from behind, and in an instant the deck was the scene of a wild hand-to-hand fight. Holton felled his foe with a revolver and then turned to the assistance of one of his seamen, beset by two men. Revolvers were banging on all sides, wildly, as it appeared to Holton, for he caught fleeting glimpses of his three men fighting as American sailors can.

In a flash of light Holton saw a man bending at the stern. In his hand was the match whence the flash had come. The officer darted swiftly toward him. He saw a sputter of sparks. Quick as thought he turned.

"Mon of the Gnat, overboard!" he roared.

Rowboats were everywhere, having sprung on the water as though by magic, and the decks of the transports were alive with figures. Searchlights were flashing in every direction, and men's voices arose in a babel of confusion.

As soon as practicable Holton changed his water-soaked clothing and went ashore, leaving the Gnat to continue her patrol.

There was little doubt in his mind that the men in the vessel were bent on the destruction of the transports, that the explosives aboard her were to be placed under the sterns of a dozen or more of the steamships, and then set off by a single electric spark.

Holton believed that the tug had gone as near to the slip as she intended to go when he discovered her, and that further operations were to have been accomplished from the row boat towing him false. But no, that could not be, for in his first glance he remembered that some stars on the horizon had been blotted out by the object. That certainly was suggestive of its tangibility.

Holton went to the little bridge, and, pointing out the spot where he had last seen the moving blot on the night, ordered the Gnat to head in that direction at half-speed.

For five minutes the little craft proceeded out into the bay, and then suddenly Holton made out clearly the outlines of a small tugboat, with a skiff in tow.

"Heave to, or I'll fire!" cried Holton.

Still no reply, but the propeller of the tug could be heard churning the water in excess speed.

Without further word, Holton snatched the rifle from the sailor's hand, took quick aim, and let drive. As a response, there came five shots in rapid succession from the tug the bullets rattling through the Gnat's funnel and ventilators upon his shoulder.

"Full speed ahead!" cried Holton, in full exultation at hearing for the first time the whistle of bullets discharged in anger. "Right into her," he added, forgetting of his boat's "in bow"—"run her down!"

When within a hundred feet the Gnat sheered off, made a detour, and rounded to in front of the tug's bow.

"Stop!" yelled Holton, leveling the rifle. "Stand by that machine gun," he added in a low tone to the man at his side.

The tug stopped abruptly, but not a sound came from her.

"What boat is that?" called Holton.

No reply.

As the bow of the torpedo boat raised against the fondle of the stranger, Holton's pistol in hand leaped over her guards to the deck three of her men followed.

Then, as though by magic shadowy forms arose. A dark figure moved swiftly at Holton's side, and as his revolver blazed in the man's face, he felt the sharp impact of a weighted club upon his shoulder.

Another man seized him from behind, and in an instant the deck was the scene of a wild hand-to-hand fight. Holton felled his foe with a revolver and then turned to the assistance of one of his seamen, beset by two men. Revolvers were banging on all sides, wildly, as it appeared to Holton, for he caught fleeting glimpses of his three men fighting as American sailors can.

In a flash of light Holton saw a man bending at the stern. In his hand was the match whence the flash had come. The officer darted swiftly toward him. He saw a sputter of sparks. Quick as thought he turned.

"Mon of the Gnat, overboard!" he roared.

Shouting action to his words, he dived swiftly into the dark waters, and the next instant the Port of Tampa was startled by an explosion which shattered the windows of the hotel and brought thousands rushing out into the night.

Holton's first thought, as soon as his head emerged above the water, was to make sure of his position, which fortunately was not ten yards from that occupied by the Gnat. He made her in several strokes, and was fished over the side by a sailor.

The man at the wheel had lighted a red flare, and by this means the other three men in the water were guided to their vessel. Beyond a few bruises, all were uninjured.

In the meantime Holton was not too busy to notice that the explosion had thrown the harbor into wild confusion. Rowboats were everywhere, having sprung on the water as though by magic, and the decks of the transports were alive with figures. Searchlights were flashing in every direction, and men's voices arose in a babel of confusion.

NEW DEPOSITS OF IRON ORE

Magnetic Beds Found in Blackfoot Indian Reservation.

While making a geologic examination of the Blackfoot Indian Reservation in northwestern Montana in 1911, Eugene Schuchert of the United States Geological Survey, found a number of magnetic beds carrying a notable percentage of iron. The beds occur in a prominent sandstone formation which can be traced for many miles, entirely across the reservation.

Although they are of considerable economic interest, especially in view of the opening of the reservation to settlement in the near future, as provided by Congress, there are apparently no published descriptions or even mention of them extant. They have not been prospected because of regulations restricting such operations on the reservation.

The magnetic beds are widely distributed over the west half of the reservation, the principal beds being found on the South Fork of Milk river. The largest towns in the region are Cut Bank, a small agricultural center and railroad point situated on the east edge of the area, and Browning, at present the Indian agency for the reservation.

The thickest beds found on the reservation occur at the mouth of Kennedy Coulee, near the Croft ranch. According to analysis made the beds average 2.5 per cent of iron and 5.1 per cent of titanium of iron and 5.3 per cent of titanium oxide.

The proportion of titanium oxide in the ore is considerable, averaging over 12 per cent in one sample. This high titanium content renders these ores unfit for use, according to present metallurgical practice, although it is believed that ores of this type eventually be successfully smelted.

CUTTING VENEERS.

Three Methods Are Used—Sawing, Slicing and the Rotary Cut.

Veneer is very thin lumber. The raw material is usually purchased in logs of random lengths. Some are cut into slabs and in turn sawed into thin sections called saw veneer. In other cases the logs, after being steamed, are shaved to sharp knives. This method produces sliced veneer. Neither of these processes is as extensively used as the third, the rotary cut, although for certain purposes they are of importance.

The structure of the wood, the size of the logs and the use for which the veneer is designed largely determine the process employed. Some foreign woods are very hard and, like soft domestic woods—the conifers, for instance—often produce the best veneer when sawed, while for other woods the slicing method is preferred. Where the product is for fine exterior finish and has to be selected and matched according to the figure or grain, sawing is the favorite method.

The rotary cut process is similar in principle to the slicing process. The log, after being steamed, is revolved against a fixed knife the length of the log and wide sheets are shaved off.

Veneers are cut into a number of thicknesses. The domestic woods, rotary cut, range from five-sixteenths to one-fiftieth of an inch and the imported woods from three-sixteenths to one-thirty-fourth. In the sawed and sliced products the thickest veneer is five-sixteenths.—Indianapolis News.

FEATS OF MEMORY.

One Man Who Astounded Wesley by His Knowledge of the Bible.

One of the most astonishing feats of memory on record is recorded by John Wesley. "I knew a man about twenty years ago," writes Wesley, "who was so thoroughly acquainted with the Bible that if he was questioned as to any Hebrew word in the Old, or any Greek word in the New Testament, he would tell, after a little pause, not only how often the one or the other occurred in the Bible, but also what it meant in every place. His name was Thomas Walsh. Such a master of Bible knowledge I never saw before, and never expect to see again."

Walsh had a close rival in Macaulay, who, according to James Stephen, could repeat "all Domostroy by heart, and all Milton, as well as a great part of the Bible."

A strange instance of freak memory is recorded in the case of a servant girl in a Scottish manse. She was almost illiterate, yet when delirious in fever, surprised those around her by repeating long passages of the Bible in Hebrew. The kitchen where the girl spent her evenings adjoined the minister's study. He was accustomed to read aloud. The girl had not understood or consciously taken heed of the reading, yet her mind had seized upon and stored the phrases.—London Chronicle.

The Absentminded Man.

Two men met at a corner during a gentle shower. One had his umbrella open, the other carried his in his hand, evidently oblivious of the fact that he had an umbrella.

"Hello," said the oblivious one, "what are you doing with that umbrella?"

"Me?"

"Yes, you. That's my umbrella."

"Your umbrella?"

"Yes, no doubt about it. I know it by the handle. There's not another like it in town."

"Oh, there isn't?" said the accused one, smiling extravagantly. "What's that you have in your hand?"

"Oh? Why, that's my umbrella," said the oblivious one. "I forgot that I had it!"—Indianapolis News.

Old Theories About Lightning.

Our forefathers had many theories about lightning. According to them no one could be struck by lightning while asleep, and no tree was safe by lightning could be burnt. Splitters from such a tree, diligently chewed, were of course, pleasant to the taste than the dentist's forceps. And the old time schoolboy firmly believed that if he were rash enough to mention lightning directly after a flash the important part of his mind would be immediately torn off. And many were his attempts to lead his fellows in that predicament.—London Chronicle.

Bold Comparison.

A visitor from South Africa, on being asked for his opinion of Niagara falls, inquired of the questioner in his turn, "What do you think of Victoria falls compared with Niagara?" The Yankee's reply was, "Victoria falls compared with Niagara—a mere frontal perspiration."

A Frequent Mistake.

"He does," replied Senator Sorghum, "when as a matter of fact he's only one of the people with a voice."—Washington Star.

LEGISLATION TO HELP STATE FARMERS SELL.

Kansas Educators Plan Co-operative Bureau to Cut Living Cost.

A marked feature of legislation in the western and southern states last winter was the trend toward the encouragement and development of the co-operative principle among farmers or among farmers and producers together.

In some states this was the natural outcome of recent efforts, usually under the direction of the state university or agricultural school, to bring together sellers and buyers of agricultural products. Thus the Kansas Agricultural college and the University of Missouri have served as clearing houses for appliers in their respective states. They obtained lists of producers and lists of buyers and acted as go-betweens.

So successful was this work in Kansas that Dean Miller of the extension division of the Kansas Agricultural college and various organizations, such as the Consumers' League, Dairy-men's, Horticultural, Tobacco Growers' and Live Stock association, the Grange, the Society of Equity, the Federation of Women's Clubs and the Federation of Labor, which should consider plans "for the encouragement of co-operative buying and selling, the betterment of the condition of agriculture and the reduction of the cost of living."

The University of Wisconsin is lending in similar work in that state, where an effort has been in progress for some time to establish co-operative storerooms and markets.
